DAENERYS' DRAGON EGGS AND UNSHILLED SOLDIERS (WITHOUT NUTS)

Why have one dragon when you can have three? With the right combination of patience and the magic of fire, these chocolatey miracles will leave you poised to aggressively conquer any party

INGREDIENTS

FOR EACH EGG

A divine right to rule
100g chocolate egg, about 12cm tall
70g pack chocolate buttons
Edible food colour sprays
Skins. You'll need skins unfortunately

FOR THE SOLDIERS

1 pack chocolate buttons, plus extra chocolate buttons for melting
1 pack ladyfinger sponge biscuits
1 pack chocolate sticks

Feeds 4

DIRECTIONS

Stand the egg in an egg cup or other suitable container to keep it upright.

Melt the tip of each button by holding it briefly in the flame of the hob (or use a little melted chocolate). Try not to think of Daeron's head liquefying while you do this.

Starting at the bottom edge, stick evenly to the egg, working your way up and round until it is covered, overlapping each row by the next, like scales.

Chill until set, then spray with the edible food colours.

With a sharp knife, trim one button for each soldier into a helmet shape, as shown. Melt a few buttons in a small basin over hot water, or in the microwave, and stick the helmet to each biscuit with a little melted chocolate. Add a chocolate shield, then stick a chocolate spear and each soldier to a chocolate button base.

Legend has it the eggs are activated by walking them into a blazing fire – though this is a health and safety nightmare. You can just break them apart with a spoon and serve.
